Wrangell Mill Secures Logs for Export Trade

SEATTLE—The Willson & Sylvester mill, located in the heart of the Tongass forest reserve at Wrangell, has secured from the department the largest cutting right ever given an Alaskan sawmill concern. The cutting right will allow the big Wrangell Narrows concern to expand for the export trade, which has been the ambition of Alaska sawmill men for years.

The Willson & Sylvester Mill company is the pioneer lumber concern of Alaska. Started over 20 years ago the mill continued until the death of the originators, when it was for several years the cause of expensive litigation in connection with the closing up of estates. Eventually the mill burned and new people secured a controlling interest. During the past two years the mill has been run to its full capacity, and enjoys an excellent reputation along the coast of Alaska.

Rafael Ruiz Convicted of Petit Larceny; Gets Eight Months in Jail

Rafael Ruiz, a Mexican, was on Friday convicted by a jury of petit larceny, and his punishment fixed at eight months' imprisonment.

On July 16 the store of the St. Michael Trading company was burglarized. Hon. P. C. McCormack, proprietor of the store, reported the matter to the local officers. On the night of July 23 the officers found a Mexican in possession of a suit of clothes which Mr. McCormack identified as being from his clothing stock. The man who had the suit of clothes in his possession stated that he bought it from Rafael Ruiz for $15, paying $7 in cash and owing for the balance. Upon investigation it was found that Ruiz left Wrangell for Petersburg on July 25. A warrant was sworn out for Ruiz and he was arrested in Petersburg and brought to Wrangell. On Thursday he was given a jury trial before U. S. Commissioner Wm. G. Thomas. The case resulted in a mistrial, the jury disagreeing.

The Commissioner ordered another trial held on Friday afternoon. This time the jury returned a verdict of guilty. Ruiz' attitude at the trial was that of disrespect if not contempt for the whole proceeding. Upon being committed to jail he proceeded to kick down a door and play the bad man generally. That night he was under guard. The next forenoon he made his escape from the jail, and had the nerve to go to the Mexican mess house at the cannery for his dinner. When it was reported to the officers that Ruiz was at the cannery they went there for him, but by that time he had dined and departed. Further search for him proved of no avail. At 9 o'clock Saturday evening Ruiz was daring enough to again come back to the Mexican mess house and ask the cook for a handout.

Sunday afternoon Ruiz was seen in the brush across the street from the Presbyterian Church picking salmon berries. Deputy U. S. Marshal Tom Dalgity, Town Marshal Earl West, Guy Carson and Lin Shields surrounded the spot where Ruiz had been seen, but the fugitive berry

Members of Notable Family Are Aboard Steamer Spokane

Mrs. Thomas H. Ince, wife of the celebrated motion picture producer, accompanied by her two sons, William Thompson Ince and Thomas H. Ince, Jr., are aboard the Steamer Spokane which is scheduled to arrive in Wrangell tomorrow forenoon.

These distinguished visitors to Alaska are on a pleasure trip and will journey north as far as Lake Atlin.

Mrs. Ince has a wonderful record of service during the war, having been very active in both charitable and patriotic work.

Miss Swanson will have charge of the high school including French, public speaking and debating.

Mr. Carlson will have charge of mathematics, manual training and boys' athletics.

Miss Rees will teach the fifth and sixth grades and will have charge of expression work in the grades and girls' athletic work in the school.

Miss Clara O'Connor will be in charge of the primary department.

Dynes People Will Publish Directory Town of Wrangell

W. M. Dynes, of Dynes' Alaska Directory company, has been in town the past few days working on a directory for Wrangell. The advantages of a directory for Wrangell are too apparent to need any comment.

R. F. Richardson, general agent for the C. P. R. for Alaska and the Yukon, with headquarters at Juneau, was in Wrangell Saturday. Mr. Richardson says the C. P. R. system is doing a tremendous tourist business this year, and that there is every indication that the business will be increased next year.

Mrs. E. R. Wilcox and children who have been occupying a residence on Cassiar street, left Saturday for the Towers camp where quarters have been provided for them. This will make it possible for the Wilcox family to be together.

Mrs. E. J. Heacock arrived from Seattle on the City of Seattle Saturday afternoon to join her husband who is connected with the Barrington Transportation company.

picker was nowhere in sight. Earl West entered an old house nearby. There appeared to be no one in the house, but Mr. West instituted a search and finally found Ruiz in hiding in the attic. The prisoner was marched to the jail where ankle cuffs were placed upon him. He will be taken to Juneau tomorrow.

Wrangell Man Doing His Best To Get Married

There is one man in Wrangell who wants a wife. Of course there are other men in the same boat with him, but the one to which we refer evidently means business, and does not propose to wait any longer than is necessary.

Recently this man wrote to the Anglo-American Association at Manchester, England, soliciting the service of that worthy organization in enabling him to get in touch with some good woman whom he could induce to come all the way from England to Alaska in order to let him make her happy. The writer of the letter became so excited over the probability of getting a wife that he forgot to sign his name.

Alexander Thompson who is the director of the Anglo-American Introductory Association formerly lived in Alaska, and therefore felt a kind of personal interest in the Wrangell wife seeker who forgot to sign his name. Accordingly Mr. Thompson wrote to Postmaster Stedman about the matter, thinking that he might happen to know the man who wrote the letter. Mr. Thompson enclosed the envelope in which the Wrangell man sent his letter. It is a two-cent Government envelope on which an additional stamp has been placed. The printed blank return notice in the upper left hand corner shows that it was purchased at the Wrangell postoffice, and the postmark shows that it was mailed at Wrangell. The address is plainly written in violet ink, and the handwriting is apparently that of an American.

In his letter Mr. Thompson says he would not have gone to all this trouble trying to locate the author of the unsigned letter were it not that he knows Alaska so well. He says he bought the Juneau News from George Carpenter some years ago, but disposed of it in a short time in order to join in the stampede to the Klondyke.

Mr. Thompson enclosed a circular letter telling of the work of the Anglo-American Introductory Association. The letter follows:

An Appeal for Help for the Good Women of This War-Torn Land

As there are, in England alone, over one million more women of marriageable age than men, even counting the grand men who have been incapacitated in their upholding the Cause of Civilization, may I enlist your help to make this movement known to single men and widowers of any age from 20 to 60, men who are willing to marry good, clean, sober, honest, moral and home-loving women.

None of these women possess 'means' but all are capable of giving to any true man, more than all the money of a rich woman can, that is the wealth a true woman gives her husband. Any introduction I give, I will be held personally responsible for every word I write.

The majority of women I am acting for are those that have had, and do now, work to earn their own living. They are not idle or useless, but just the type of women who can make any man's home a little paradise. I am only looking for men who would appreciate just such an woman, not those who expect to make a slave of a wife.

Alaska Greatly Needs Advertising, Says New York Editor

(Crowded out last week)

George J. Hurst, a prominent editor and publisher of New York City, who in company with Mrs. Hurst has been spending the past two weeks in Wrangell and vicinity left on the Princess Mary Friday evening for their eastern home.

Mr. Hurst is at the head of the New York News Bureau Association which publishes a number of newspapers, one of which is Financial America, which is so well known in business circles.

When asked for his opinion concerning Alaska Mr. Hurst said that Alaska is sorely in need of proper advertising. According to Mr. Hurst the people of the north do not realize how firmly entrenched in the minds of the eastern people is the belief that Alaska is a land of perpetual snow and ice inhabited by eskimos, polar bears and walrus. He said: "When I get back to New York if I should tell people that while in Alaska wife and I feasted on strawberries which we picked there ourselves they would be apt to say, 'What are you trying to give us, George?' The majority of the people in the east do not think of Alaska as having any agricultural possibilities at all, and it would be hard for them to believe that a substantial food product like spuds could be grown here."

Having spent some years as a mining engineer before entering the newspaper business Mr. Hurst naturally takes notice of the mineral resources of Alaska of which there has been very little development. He says the coal in Alaska should not only be a big factor in its development, but be a great source of revenue, for instead of coal being shipped into Alaska it should be exported from Alaska.

Mr. Hurst thinks it not improbable that oil may be the means of putting Alaska on the map. He says there is no question about Alaska having oil, and that owing to oil being a subject of current interest an oil boom in the north would attract the attention of people who have heretofore scarcely ever thought of Alaska.

Owing to the almost limitless timber resources of the north Mr. Hurst thinks that the mere word Alaska should be the solution of the paper crisis which is so acute in the States at the present time.

Mr. Hurst is one of the stockholders in the Bon Alaska Mining company and expects to visit Wrangell again next summer.

Mr. Hurst says he is acting only for women on this and men on our side of the Atlantic. I have now placed one thousand men in correspondence. Such being so, no man need be ashamed of his connection with this movement. In fact just the opposite, as every man helping to make this known is helping the Cause of Humanity.

I make no charge, leaving it to every man to, or not, send me a donation to help me carry on this work. Such is needed but above and beyond everything my sole aim is to help the grand women of this land.

As the promoter of this work, which I started five years ago, is an old western pioneer Press and Immigration man. I first crossed the Plains to the Coast, from Louisiana, via the Old Santa Fe Trail from Kansas, in 1873. By this you will see I understand both the domestic and social conditions in the West.

My work is open to the most

Message from Governor

Grant, Mayor, Wrangell.
Had hoped to get to Wrangell to greet Army aviators, but find I am unable to leave. Express my welcome and the welcome of the Territory to Captain Streett and his daring companions, and wish them every success in their trip to Nome.
RIGGS,
Governor.

J. G. Grant, Mayor, Wrangell.
Please extend on behalf of the citizens of the Capitol City of Alaska a hearty greeting to the gallant aviators who are making their entry into Alaska through your city and a cordial invitation to fly over our city and Gastineau channel where six thousand Alaskans are eager to see their flight.
R. E. Robertson,

Wrangell Crab Cannery Will Start Very Soon

Mayor J. G. Grant is in receipt of a letter from A. H. Range who is at the head of the crab cannery project, in which he states that he hopes to sail from Seattle for Wrangell with his family on August 10, and if unable to get away on that date he will leave on August 16. Having taken over the cold storage plant of the Columbia & Northern it will probably not require much time for Mr. Range to get started to operating.

Boy Shoots Himself Through Hand While Fooling With Pistol

Harold Hofstad, son of I. M. Hofstad, of Scow Bay, on Sunday shot himself through the right hand with a revolver. The boy was fooling with the gun when it was accidentally discharged. He was brought to town and his wound dressed. No serious results are looked for.—Petersburg Report.

W. N. Beach of New York whose motion pictures of big game in the Cassiar attracted so much attention in the east last year, was aboard the Princess Mary Tuesday en route to Cordova from which point he will go into the region above McCarthy. Mr. Beach has made several trips up the Stikine and is a great booster for the Cassiar.

Miss Mary Louise Bihler arrived from Seattle on the City of Seattle for a visit with Mrs. P. C. McCormack. Miss Bihler was formerly a member of the faculty of the Wrangell public school and has a host of friends here.

Miss June Elliott of the Wrangell Sentinel force returned on the City of Seattle Saturday from a three weeks' visit with relatives in Spokane and Seattle.

Again I say, help some good woman and yourself to human happiness.

Sincerely yours,
Alexander Thompson.

Air Squadron Still Having Tough Luck

The Army air squadron are surely having their trials and vicissitudes in the attempted flight from New York to Nome. The flyers are expected in Wrangell shortly, but the time of their arrival is a matter of conjecture. However, Wrangell will be more than glad to welcome Captain Streett and his companions whenever they do arrive. Neither the Sentinel nor Sergeant McLaughlin have received any word from the flyers since Tuesday when the following message was sent out by the press service:

PRINCE GEORGE--Tuesday--Three of the four army planes comprising the Alaskan squadron which is blazing a trail from Mineola, N. Y. to Nome, Alaska, arrived here yesterday from Jasper. Captain St. Clair Streett, commander of the squadron, and pilot of the fourth plane, was forced to put back to Jasper shortly after the hop-off, but arrived here later in the day. He damaged his plane again while landing and may be forced to discontinue the flight temporarily. The other three probably will hop off for Hazelton late today or tomorrow morning.

Mexico to Use 60,000 Troops Against Cantu

MEXICO CITY—Gov. Estaban Cantu of Lower California has declared himself in open rebellion against the authority of the central government at Mexico City and immediate steps will be taken to crush him, the War Office announced today.

It was declared that 60,000 Federal troops can be concentrated against Cantu if needed.

LOS ANGELES—Tuesday—Lieutenant Ormer Locklear, noted "stunt" aviator, and Lieutenant Milton Elliott were killed today when their plane crashed to the earth from a height of 1,000 feet.

Story of Newlyweds In Wrangell Will Appear in Next Issue

A story of the newlywed couple, Mr. and Mrs. Joyce of Indiana and their visit to Wrangell business houses will be printed in the Sentinel next week, as will also their trip up the Stikine river. The story also speaks of Wrangell two years hence.

Several of the inspectors for the National Cannery's Association in Southeastern Alaska this week received notice of transfer. Gordon Bouck who has been stationed at Wrangell has been transferred to Petersburg. Larry Smith who has been stationed at Ketchikan has been transferred to Wrangell. D. P. Hennes, who has been stationed at Petersburg has also been transferred to Wrangell. Mr. Hennes was recently married and will arrive from Petersburg with his wife on the Jefferson. He is a brother of A. F. Hennes who has been stationed at Wrangell since the beginning of the season but who has been transferred to Ketchikan.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA OUT OF BALANCE

That Its Industrial Life Has Not Kept Pace With Its Agricultural Has Been Fatal to Country's Prosperity.

Article XVIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Less than 10 per cent of the people of Russia "permanently" live in cities or towns. I write the word "permanently" to call attention to the fact that a number of peasants and villagers come to the cities and towns to work for a part of the year in the industries. They retain their peasant status and their dwellings in the villages. In 1910 there were only forty cities in the Russian empire with a population of from 50,000 to 100,000; only four cities with a population of over 100,000.

Poverty forced upon the Russian people the co-operative spirit. In a great, long strain people can stand up together better than alone. It is the idea of consolation in companionship. It is a principle of mass psychology that a group of men will dare to do a thing, to stand a suffering or a danger that no individual in the crowd would undertake alone. The Russians have suffered from the dawn of history, and one of the oldest institutions of Russian life is the Artel. The Artel very much resembles the co-operative society of western Europe, with this difference, that the co-operative society in Europe and America is the outgrowth of an economic trend. In Russia it was the unpremeditated result of necessity. It is the difference between one who is hungry because he is dieting and one who is starving because he is without food.

The workers of Russia have suffered the same slavery the peasants have endured. The maximum wage has been a starvation pay. So when the working men from a province come to a city to work in the textile industries or as carpenters, masons, etc., they at once unite in groups of from ten to fifty persons, rent a house, keep a common table, elect an elder of the Artel, to whom each one pays his share of the expense. All over Russia one finds the Artel—in the cities, in the lumber camps, even in the prisons. When a building is to be put up an Artel is organized. When a railroad is being built an Artel is formed. In some instances the Artel resembles a labor union, in that the arrangement of the terms of employment is made by a delegate or committee appointed by the Artel.

Live in Squalor and Misery.

Village life is primitive. The villagers live out of the world. The villages are very small, particularly in the extreme north. The houses are generally cheap wooden shanties. Owing to the great danger of fire, the villages generally cover a large area of ground. The houses are scattered and straggling. The conveniences found even in the American tenements are unknown. There is no chance for cleanliness. They live and sleep in crowded, smoky, unfinished houses. Furniture—they haven't what we call furniture, even what the poorest farm tenant in America would call furnishings. A board for a table, a shake-down for a bed.

Russia's industrial life has always been out of balance with her agricultural life. Notwithstanding her riches of raw material and her great possibilities for a successful industrial life, Russia has continued to be a nation with 81 per cent farmers, 7 or 8 per cent permanently engaged in industry, and 3 or 4 per cent of peasants who devoted part of the time to work in the industries. It has been said repeatedly that the Imperial Russian government from the time of Peter the Great has been unceasing in its efforts for the creation and development of home manufactures. All of the evidence I have examined refutes this statement. There never has been any security to the worker in Russia. The only protection he has had been his interest in the family allotment. He could go back there and be hungry; in the city starvation was the danger.

The cars put every obstacle in the way of education and of course this prevented the growth of industry.

In 1902 the principal industries in Russia, representing all of the factories throughout the empire, of which the annual production was valued at more than $1,000,000, were textiles, food products, animal products, wood, paper, chemical products, ceramics, mining, metal goods, miscellaneous, and all of these employed only 2,259,773 workers.

Led Up to Bolshevik Problem.

This dwarfed, stunted, paralyzed side of Russia—its industrial side—has a direct bearing upon conditions in Russia today and is an important part of the problem of the bolshevik government.

A nation to be economically normal must have balanced agricultural, manufacturing and commercial sides. If these three departments of activity are not proportionately developed the nation is economically a cripple. Russia has been and is in this sense an economic cripple. Her body is great and powerful; the physical constitution is strong. One arm, agriculture, is overdeveloped, and its overdevelopment has been at the sacrifice of the other arm. Russia, economically, in one physical respect, reminds me of Wilhelm Hohenzollern, late of Prussia, now living in Holland. I refer to his withered, undeveloped baby arm. Russia's undeveloped industrial arm is just such a crippled, useless arm. Reference to the ex-emperor, who is now sawing wood in Holland, suggests to my mind the words of a great German economist, List:

"A nation cannot promote and further its civilization, its prosperity and its social progress equally as well by exchanging agricultural products for manufactured goods as by establishing a manufacturing power of its own. A merely agricultural nation can never develop to any extent a home or a foreign commerce, with inland means of transport and foreign navigation, increase its population in due proportion to their well-being, or make notable progress in its moral, intellectual, social and political development; it will never acquire important political power or be placed in a position to influence the cultivation and progress of less advanced nations and to form colonies of its own. A mere agricultural state is infinitely less powerful than an agricultural-manufacturing state. The former is always economically and politically dependent on those foreign nations which take from it agriculture in exchange for manufactured goods. It cannot determine how much it will produce, it must wait and see how much others will buy from it. The agricultural-manufacturing states on the contrary produce for themselves large quantities of raw materials and provisions and supply merely the deficiency from importation. The purely agricultural nations are thus dependent for the power of effecting sales on the chances of a more or less bountiful harvest in the agricultural-manufacturing nations. They have, moreover, to compete in their sales with other purely agricultural nations, whereby the power of sale in itself is uncertain; they are exposed to the danger of ruin in their trading with agricultural-manufacturing nations by war or new tariffs, whereby they suffer the double disadvantage of finding no buyers for their surplus agricultural products and of failing to obtain supplies of the manufactured goods they require. An agricultural nation is a man with one arm who makes use of an arm belonging to another person but cannot, of course, be sure of having it always available. An agricultural-manufacturing nation is a man who has two good arms of his own at his disposal.

Poland Cited as an Example. List further points out that the relative cultivation of the agricultural and manufacturing arms of a country possessed of an ample and fertile territory will give that country a population twice to three times as large as it could secure by the development of the agricultural arm alone, and maintain this vastly increased population in a much higher degree of comfort. Surplus agricultural produce is not necessarily capital in an agricultural country. Countries which produce such a surplus and remain dependent upon manufacturing countries are often obliged to purchase these manufactured goods at an enhanced price. He points to Poland as an example. She exported the fruits of her soil to obtain the goods which she could have manufactured from it. As a consequence she felt like a house of cards when organized nations attacked her. List considers that had Poland developed her manufacturing arm, besides retaining her national independence she would have exceeded any other European country in prosperity. To use List's words: "Go to fallen Poland and ask its hapless people now whether it is advisable for a nation to buy the fabrics of a foreign country so long as its native manufacturers are not sufficiently strengthened to be able to compete in price and quality with the foreigners."

Bolshevism has set out to socialize political, agricultural and industrial Russia, and as I expect to examine the effects of communism in each of these departments of Russian life I have set down some historical and economical truths which must be kept in mind when examining the Lenine panacea. (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

France Needs Raw Materials. Economic disturbances in France during the period of readjustment of wages to high prices were predicted by Leon Jouhaux, chief labor representative on the French delegation to the international labor conference at Washington. "The lack of raw materials is the only thing that prevents the French workingman from going back to his job," said M. Jouhaux.

"We must have cotton and coal from the United States, for it will be from three to five years before the French coal mines can be operated. Of course, wages must go up in France on account of the increased cost of living, and it is probable that before the workman gets this increase there will be more or less economic disturbance."

Japanese Miners Strike.

Miners of Japan are beginning to demand higher wages and fewer hours of employment. Seven thousand copper miners at Ashio, near Nikko, went on strike recently and in view of the gravity of the situation a detachment of infantry and a strong contingent of police were hurried to the district front Utsunomiya. The miners formed a funeral procession, some of them carrying large funeral streamers and white lanterns.

Another strike has broken out at an iron mine near Sendai.

M. of spruce and 40,000 feet B. M. of hemlock, more or less. No bid of less than $1.50 per M feet for spruce and $1.00 per M feet of hemlock will be considered. Deposit with bid $500. The right to reject any and all bids reserved. The recent census of Nome gives a population of nearly 900, and the steamship Victoria dumped 450 persons in town shortly after, giving the city a new impetus.

Casey and Wart, two infantrymen stationed at St. Michael, had a thrilling experience with a polar bear while on a hunting trip recently. The bear was chasing walrus on the ice when first seen and gave battle to the soldiers who threw down a barrage and bagged him.

A Real Remedy.
 A soldier went to a "quack" doctor and complained of a sharp pain after sitting on damp grass for some hours, during which he had frequently sucked the point of a lead pencil. The "quack" told him that he was suffering from 'plumbism' and gave him some pills. The next day he returned to the "quack" and said, "You told me I had 'plumbism,' which is lead poisoning, and I now find there is no lead in lead pencils, only graphite or plumbago." "Oh," replied the "quack" airily, "did I say plumbism is the cause of your plumbism? I meant to have said plumbago is the cause of your lumbago." "Oh," said the man, "But, anyhow, your pills are only bread." "Of course!" replied the "quack." "Don't you know that bread is the finest thing to remove pencil marks with? You didn't want me to give you India-rubber pills, did you?"

Smallest Honey Bees.
 In some of the East Indian islands, and on the mainland of Hindustan, are to be found the smallest race of honey bees in the world. These dwarf honey collectors are known to entomologists as apis florea. Their honey combs are no larger than a child's hand, and the cells are about the size of a small pin-head. This honey is excellent, as is the wax. The little creatures build the combs on the branch of a low tree, and as they have not to provide for winter, they work all the year through, raising broods like themselves. In the same land there is a race of giant bees, apis dorsata, as large as a field cricket. These monsters of the bee world build honeycombs that are from six to seven feet in length, four or more in width, and which weigh from 300 to 400 pounds each.

The "Flying Dutchman."
 Perhaps the best known of all sea ghosts is the Flying Dutchman. The tradition goes that a Dutch sea captain, Cornelius Vanderdecken, was homeward bound from Batavia. In endeavoring to round the Cape of Good Hope he met with such baffling head winds that after nine long, weary weeks he hardly shifted his position. In a fit of passion, Vanderdecken cursed God, and vowed by heaven and hell that he would round the Cape if it took him till the day of judgment. For his impiety he was doomed to beat to and fro for all time, and the phantom ship has been reported many times, certain misfortune being expected on any vessel who sights her.

Learning What to Kill.
 Did you ever stop to think when you put your foot down to crush a little insect that you might be taking the life of something very valuable? Even the little beetles and toads and snakes, which I know you don't like, according to our naturalists are doing a good work, destroying insects that are hurtful to our crops, our vegetables and even our pretty flowers. The snake really eats so many poisonous insects that he is like nature's policeman sure enough. Some one has suggested that each boy and girl call themselves members of a protective association, and see how many little harmless lives they can protect everyday. Always be sure before you kill anything is the best plan. —Kansas City Star.

Only One Way.
 The mild young gentleman, having read that every man ought to have a knowledge of self-defense, betook himself to an instructor of boxing, arranged terms, took off his jacket and vest, put on the gloves and started to learn things. "This," said the professor, "is the way you do it." With that he landed the pupil a sounding thump under the jaw. When the pupil recovered consciousness he said, "May I ask whether it was necessary for you to knock me down like that?" "Not at all," said the professor; "far from it. There were three hundred and forty-six other ways in which I could have knocked you down."

Quotations for Self Advertisers.
 "I do advertise. Why not? etc., etc." —W. L. George.
 "And here I value not their censure that pretend it is foolish and affected for any person to praise himself; yet let it be as silly as they please, if they will but allow it useful; and indeed what is more befitting than that folly should be the trumpet of her own praise, and dance after her own pipe? For who can set me forth better than myself? or who can be so well acquainted with my condition?" —From Erasmus, "The Praise of Folly."

Waiting for the Hostess.
 I was invited out for dinner and it happened that the minister and his wife were also present. We were a friendly group. At dinner time we were seated at the table, all but the hostess, who was attending to some little matter in the kitchen. We were waiting for her to take her place before the minister said grace. The hostess was a wee bit fussed and called out from the kitchen: "Dig right in, folks; don't wait for me!" But she soon got next to herself and took her place. —Exchange.

Of Course She Knew.
 Ruth and her papa were sitting on the back porch watching the birds, when a woodpecker flew to a nearby tree. "Do you know what kind of a bird that is?" her papa asked, and, with an air of importance, Ruth quickly responded: "Why, sure I do; it's a Red Cross bird."

Four auto stage loads of tourists recently arrived in Chitina from the interior camp of Fairbanks, being part of a body of Midnight Sun excursionists, who wanted to make the interior trip. They expressed themselves as delighted with the scenery en route from the interior. Dinner was served to the party and a day of sports concluded with an able address by Judge Wm. O'Connor.

The dredge constructed on Sunset creek in the Port Clarence district last summer was sold at Nome recently by the marshal to satisfy a judgment secured by employes for wages due them.

Where Is Karl Horath?

Information is wanted of Karl Horath, miner, age 43, grey-blue eyes, light brown hair, medium size, last heard from while working on dam at Cushionberry ranch, Victorville, California, in 1911; soon after left for Alaska. Aged mother and sister will kindly thank for information. Anna Horath, Warwick, Orange county, New York.

Persian Carpets.

The shah of Persia has passed a law forbidding persons to weave carpets according to European design. Violation of the enactment is a criminal offense, and the imperative attitude taken will have a greater tendency than ever to raise the Persian carpet or rug in esteem. Often a Persian carpet will remain in the family for generations, such careful treatment does it receive. When the owner of a valuable carpet dies he very often gives instructions that it shall be cut in pieces as heirlooms to his successors, and should a member of the family not receive a portion he would feel very greatly slighted. The designs of Persian carpets have been handed down from remote ages. Each family keeps its own design, no two carpets being alike for fear of the evil eye.

"Poison" Made Hit in Harem.

The origin of wine making also is claimed by the Persians, whose king, Jemsheed, stored a quantity of grapes in his cellar for future use. The grapes fermented and, becoming very acid, were believed to be poison. They were so labeled. A woman of the king's harem, who desired to commit suicide, took freely of the juice and became very drunk. After a lengthy sleep, however, she awoke perfectly well, and was so pleased with her experiment that she finished the remainder of the poison. Jemsheed found out what had happened too late to 'come in' on the first vintage, but he took steps to insure having a plentiful supply of juice in future for himself.

In Switzerland.

It is the peculiar characteristic of Switzerland that, after crossing its frontiers, one never appears to have wholly left the neighboring countries behind. The northern "gates" seem to introduce one to a modified Germany; at Geneva one is still in a French-speaking country; while the impression one receives upon entering from the south of still being upon Italian soil is at first difficult to shake off. The character of the scenery serves only to heighten the illusion. Ethnologically, as well as physically, the soil of Switzerland seems to invite the various people of the earth to make of the country a place of rendezvous where international differences are forgotten.

Invaluable Coconut.

What the coconut means to the South Sea Islands native, Mr. Farrell says, scarcely can be exaggerated. He makes that of the leaves. In some islands he wears a skirt of shredded leaf. Coconut sennit is his cord. In most low islands, where the water is brackish and undrinkable, he depends on the milk of a green nut, or, better, the sap of a tightly bound bud. Fermented, this becomes coconut toddy, and, boiled, it is a brown, sweet-syrup beverage. When the islander dances or goes abroad in the rain he anoints his body with coconut-oil. And every drop takes its toll from the copra production.

Old Saying.

The proverb "One swallow does not make a summer" is very ancient. You will find it in the Ethics of Aristotle, who was born 384 years before the Christian era. There it takes this form: "One swallow maketh not a spring, nor a woodcock a winter." In Attica the children were given a holiday when the swallow first appeared in the spring, and Horace connected the zephyrs of the spring with the coming of the swallows. In Italy and Spain the proverb still runs: "One swallow does not make a spring." But in more northern latitudes the swallow arrives later, and their proverbial literature has it that one swallow does not make a summer.

Agnosticism.

Agnosticism is a school of thought which believes that beyond what man can know by his senses or feel by his higher affections, nothing can be known. Facts or supposed facts both of the lower and the higher life, are accepted, but all inferences deduced from these facts as to the existence of an unseen world, or of beings higher than man are considered unsatisfactory, and are ignored. Agnostics, positivists, and secularists have much in common, and many people exist to whom any one of the three names might be indifferently applied.

Ancient Game Is Cribbage.

Cribbage is one of the few card games that is of undoubted English origin. It was played in Elizabethan times, only in those days it went by the name of "noddly." The earliest treatise on the game is contained in "The Compleat Gamester," published in 1674. Now there is quite a library of books on cribbage, which explain how to play it, and elucidate the mysteries of "one for his nob," "two for his heels," and other quaint expressions of the game handed down to us through the centuries.

Dog Long Friend of Man.

The dog is said to be the first animal to be domesticated by man. The primitive dwarf tribes of the Philippines, the pygmies of equatorial Africa and the Vedda of Ceylon when white Europeans first came to know them had one domestic animal—the dog. When Columbus landed on the island of Haiti he found there an excellent breed of dogs, used for hunting by the natives, who, when not employing them in the chase kept them in cages.

Charles Carlson and Fred Webster, both of whom spent the winter Outside, returned to Unalakleet last month, by way of the McKinley district. They say they saw enough quartz properties on the trip to pay the nation's war debt.

The Hunter, a famous resort of the early days of Nome, located at the corner of Front street and Hunter Way, was re-opened last week as a billiard and pool hall, selling soft drinks. The new proprietor will be Sol Warren, who was associated with Dr. Wilkinson in the old establishment when something harder than sodas were retailed and dance hall girls raked down their commission. Warren at one time was in the newspaper game and was the man who exposed the famous Midas creek fake, thereby preventing a wild and dangerous stampede.

Both Inventions of Americans.

There is an English proverb which commends as a cure "a hair of the dog that bit you." And it is an interesting fact, though hardly a coincidence, if national inventive characteristics be borne in mind, that one of the most deadly man-killing machines, which the world owes to the genius of an American, the late Sir Hiram Maxim, should have found its antidote—the "tank"—in a device directly inspired by the invention of a compatriot, Mr. Benjamin Holt.
